

Beavers

by Dennis Lange

Beavers are perfectly created for what they do. They have dense fur that waterproofs and insulates. Imagine fur that had only one of those qualities. Waterproof fur that didn't insulate would make beavers vulnerable to the cold. Insulating fur that wasn't waterproof would make them unfit for their lives in the water. Both are necessary for the beaver to survive.

Beavers have strong claws on the front feet for digging. Their hind feet are webbed for swimming. Their tails act as rudders. They have teeth for gnawing the trees and when they finish, their cuts look like those of men with axes.

They are engineers that build dams and intricate houses. They plaster the sides of their lodges to keep out enemies. They know to make ventilation shafts and air shafts. Their ears and nostrils close under water, where they can remain for 15 minutes.

Beavers were perfectly made by God.

Heb.3:4 For every house is built by someone, but the builder of all things is God.
