

Birds and Eggs

by Dennis Lange

Have you ever thought about the very first bird laying the very first egg? If evolution were true, would it have laid eggs while sitting on a branch? Would it have laid eggs and flown away, not knowing that the eggs needed to be incubated?

From the beginning, there had to be:

- a male AND a female;
- the realization that eggs cannot be laid while sitting high in a tree clinging to a branch;
- the ability to make nests;
- the knowledge that the egg must be taken care of;
- the ability to incubate the egg;
- the instinct to take care of the baby birds when they hatched.

God created birds fully capable in the beginning. Evolution would have them develop by trial and error. They simply wouldn't have survived.

Job 35:10,11 God my Maker...who teaches us more than the beasts of the earth, and makes us wiser than the birds of the heavens.
