

Discus Fish

by Dennis Lange

The discus is a small fish native to South America and is used in aquariums. When viewed from the side, its shape is like a disk. Discus fish have a wide variety of beautiful colors and designs. A unique feature of the fish is the way it feeds its young. The parent secretes a nutritious mucus that sticks to its body. The newborn discus fish feed on this secretion and would die without it.

The fish has to have the capability of producing the mucus and the ability to secrete it. The mucus must be nutritious for the babies to survive and the mucus must stick to the fish rather than float off and away from the young.

The discus fish is just another sticky problem that godless evolutionists cannot solve.

Job 12:8,9 And let the fish of the sea declare to you. Who among all these does not know that the hand of the Lord has done this?
